Project in the Asia-Pacific Region 1976 this report assesses the impact upon the 29th infantry division light of participating in a multinational force and observers mfo peacekeeping pk mission in the sinai desert senior leaders from the nine maneuver battalions that contributed approximately 90 of the division s pk mission volunteers were surveyed twice and interviewed once to determine what training and personnel impacts their units had experienced a stratified random sample of junior leader s soldiers from these units was also surveyed along with active army readiness advisers to these units and soldiers who had volunteered initially for the mission but later withdrew senior leaders reported that the opportunity to participate in the pk mission produced a psychological boost for the soldiers in their units the mission inspired renewed pride in their units and pride in the army national guard as a entity capable of manning significant real world contributions to world peace future participation in similar missions was endorsed by all group surveyed positive impacts on morale and family support were reported senior leader reports of training impact were initially negative grew increasingly positive during the course of the mission and were found to be decidedly positive after mission volunteers were reassigned to their units combat readiness was the only area where negative impacts were reported throughout the duration of the pk mission the return of mission volunteers however caused more than offsetting positive impacts in this area dtic

Cooperative Optimal Control of Hybrid Energy Systems 2021-02-15 the modern us army as we know it was largely created in the years between the two world wars prior to world war i officers in leadership positions were increasingly convinced that building a new army could not take place as a series of random developments but was an enterprise that had to be guided by a distinct military policy that enjoyed the support of the nation in 1920 congress accepted that idea and embodied it in the national defense act in doing so it also accepted army leadership s idea of entrusting america s security to a unique force the citizen army and tasked the nation s regular army with developing and training that force creating the modern army details the efforts of the regular army to do so in the face of austerity budgets and public apathy while simultaneously responding to the challenges posed by the new and revolutionary mechanization of warfare in this book woolley focuses on the development of what he sees as the four major features of the modernized army that emerged due to these efforts these included the creation of the civilian components of the new army the citizen s military training camps the officer reserve corps the national guard and the reserve officer training corps the development of the four major combat branches as the structural basis for organizing the army as well as creating the means to educate new officers and soldiers about their craft and to socialize them into an army culture the creation of a rationalized and progressive system of professional military education and the initial mechanization of the combat branches woolley also points out how the development of the army in this period was heavily influenced by policies and actions of the president and congress the us army that fought world war ii was clearly a citizen army whose leadership was largely trained within the framework of the institutions of the army created by the national defense act the way that army fought the war may have been less decisive and more costly in terms of lives and money than it should have been but that army won the war and therefore validated the citizen army as the us way of war

Report of the Joint Inspection Unit on Senior-level Appointments in the United Nations and Its Programmes and Funds 2000 family caregiving affects millions of Americans every day in all walks of life. At least 17.7 million individuals in the United States are caregivers of an older adult with a health or functional limitation. The nation's family caregivers provide the lion's share of long-term care for our older adult population. They are also central to older adults' access to and receipt of health care and community-based social services. Yet the need to recognize and support caregivers is among the least appreciated challenges facing the aging U.S. population. Families caring for an aging America examines the prevalence and nature of family caregiving of older adults and the available evidence on the effectiveness of programs, supports, and other interventions designed to support family caregivers. This report also assesses and recommends policies to address the needs of family caregivers and to minimize the barriers that they encounter in trying to meet the needs of older adults.
